

Video Producer

MRI Online is seeking a multi-talented producer to generate world class educational material for our website. You will supervise recording sessions with top radiology educators and work with the content team to build new learning modules for the site.

The ideal candidate should be:

- Capable of leading a production team to build compelling and effective medical education content.
- Have a strong sense of narrative and technical storytelling. Make dry topics interesting and digestible for the audience.
- Download and distill research topics for their most valuable components and assist presenters with delivering their knowledge to the web.
- Maintain a high level of organization throughout the production process: planning, shooting and deployment.
- Passion for education and learning.
- Understand the ins and outs of the video production process: scripting/planning, shooting, editing, post production, etc.

Responsibilities/Requirements

- 5 years of video or equivalent media production
- Management/team leadership experience
- Foundational knowledge of production tools
- Some experience with modern collaborative web apps, e.g. Google Docs, LMS (learning management systems), CMS (content management systems)
- Experience or understanding of medical industry/terminology is a plus
